Entering ENSM to become a Merchant Navy Officer

From high-school to the vessel, ENSM (Ecole Nationale Supérieure Maritime), the French Maritime Academy, trains merchant navy officers and seagoing engineer-level personnel who operate the largest non-military vessels. Under all flags and on the world's seas and oceans, containerships, cruise ships, ferries, oil tankers, working or survey vessels are operated by merchant navy officers.

From CMA CGM to Gazocean, from SOCATRA to Ponant, from Brittany Ferries to V.Ships, from Corsica Linea to Bourbon, from Louis-Dreyfus armateurs to DFDS, from La Méridionale to Yachting, from Orange Marine to Genavir or from CFTO to the Express des Iles... the French shipping companies rank among the best worldwide.

They recruit women and men who will occupy deck and engine officer positions and will retrain easily thanks to their work in autonomy and their great versatility. This profession, which requires passion and a high level of responsibilities, is usually carried out with multicultural crews. It demands a large open-mindedness, scientific curiosity and legal rigour, tolerance and seafarers' values.
